

College of Medicine

Culture of the College of Medicine

The Values of the ArizonaMed Curriculum and the Educational Objectives for the Program Leading to the MD Degree are fostered by the culture of the College of Medicine, which is one of:

Respect

The University of Arizona, College of Medicine values the contributions of professionals in all disciplines to the educational process and to the provision of quality health care; respects diversity of personal characteristics such as age, sex, sexual orientation, ethnicity and religious beliefs; and fosters a learning and work environment typified by collegiality, collaboration, professionalism and attitudes of caring.

Excellence in Academic Achievement

The University of Arizona College of Medicine encourages the development of attitudes promoting excellence in academic achievement. The diverse professional aspirations of students are respected and the education of a pluripotential graduate is supported. The College values self-reflection and critical assessment of the performance of faculty, students, and staff and provides resources and support for improvement. The College demonstrates commitment to education and teaching excellence through the allocation of resources for the development and reward of highly skilled educators and mentors and values the life-long pursuit of learning.